A Message from the President of the Republic of the Philippines

Today, January 28, 2001, I affirm before the seal of my Office the unwavering commitment, and support of the Government, to reform our country's Land Administration and Management sector. This is one of the core elements in my administration's "Bumagay-Ordin" programme of governance to alleviate poverty and accelerate economic development.

I believe there's no better occasion for me to say this, than today, when the primary drivers and partners of this initiative are all gathered, together with our country's key decision-makers, in the hope of further boosting reforms.

Truly, there's a huge untapped potential in the land administration and management (LAM) sector that, if harnessed to the fullest, can become a powerful instrument for the country's campaign to defeat poverty and promote economic growth.

I trust the strategies and directions being taken by the lead government departments to achieve our desired LAM reforms. But just as in any endeavor, much can still be done, especially if we stand undaunted by transient concerns that tend to blur our long-term goals. This gathering is one good example of strategic thinking.

The Government will remain a constant advocate of change, whenever and wherever it is needed, especially for the country's future has more valuable resources which is our lands.

61 armed groups threats to ARMM polls

MANILA, Dec. 31 (AP) — Sixty-one armed groups have threatened to disrupt the upcoming regional elections in the Autonomous Region in Muslim Mindanao (ARMM), according to a report from the Philippine National Police (PNP).

Marketing, communications enter digital age

By David A. Reardon
 The marketing and communications industries are undergoing a dramatic transformation as digital technologies reshape the way companies reach their customers. From targeted email campaigns to interactive websites, the digital age is creating new opportunities for businesses to connect with their audience.

Marketing personnel are now expected to be experts in a wide range of digital tools and techniques. This includes everything from search engine optimization to social media marketing. The demand for digital marketing professionals is growing rapidly, and companies are investing heavily in training and development to ensure their marketing teams are up to the task.

Communications
 The communications industry is also embracing digital technologies. Traditional media outlets like newspapers and television networks are exploring ways to integrate digital content into their offerings. At the same time, new digital-only media companies are emerging, challenging the established players.

Advertising
 The advertising industry is being disrupted by digital technologies. Traditional advertising methods like print and broadcast are losing ground to digital advertising, which offers more targeted and measurable results. Advertisers are increasingly turning to digital channels to reach their target audience.

Consumer behavior
 The digital age is changing the way consumers behave. They are more informed and more empowered than ever before. They can research products and services online, compare prices, and read reviews from other consumers. This has led to a more competitive marketplace and has forced companies to be more transparent and responsive to their customers.

Future outlook
 The digital age is still in its early stages, and there is much more to come. As digital technologies continue to advance, the marketing and communications industries will continue to evolve. Companies that embrace digital technologies and adapt to the changing landscape will be the ones that thrive in the future.

Cellular phones take on another incarnation

By David A. Reardon
 Cellular phones are no longer just tools for staying in touch. They have become powerful devices that can do much more than make and receive calls. From taking photos to playing games, cellular phones are becoming an essential part of our lives.

Evolution of the device
 The evolution of the cellular phone has been remarkable. From the bulky "brick" phones of the 1980s to the sleek, feature-rich smartphones of today, the device has come a long way. The addition of color screens, cameras, and internet access has opened up a whole new world of possibilities for users.

Market growth
 The market for cellular phones is growing rapidly. As more people use mobile devices, the demand for new features and services is increasing. This has led to a highly competitive market with many companies vying for a share of the market.

Applications
 The range of applications for cellular phones is expanding. In addition to communication, they are used for entertainment, productivity, and even health monitoring. The possibilities are limited only by the imagination.

Security concerns
 As cellular phones become more powerful, security concerns are growing. From data theft to identity theft, there are many risks associated with using mobile devices. Users need to be aware of these risks and take steps to protect their information.

Future trends
 The future of cellular phones is bright. As technology continues to advance, we can expect to see even more powerful and versatile devices. The cellular phone is truly a device of the future, and it's only getting started.

Models' excessive thinness a global issue

FASHION models' excessive thinness has become a global issue, with many models suffering from eating disorders and other health problems. The problem is not just limited to the fashion industry but has become a widespread concern across the world.

Body image
The fashion industry has long been criticized for promoting unrealistic body standards. Models are often pressured to maintain extremely low body weights, which can lead to serious health consequences.

bright Christmas

The holiday season is a time of joy and celebration for many people. However, for some women, the pressure to look perfect can be overwhelming. This is especially true for those in the fashion industry, where the standards are often unrealistic. It's important to remember that everyone has their own unique beauty, and it's okay to not be perfect.
